

What is credit flexibility?

Credit flexibility provides students with a variety of options regarding the courses that they take and the method in which they take them.

Is credit flexibility a requirement?

Yes. Ohio Senate Bill 311 requires every school district in the state to offer students opportunities to earn high school credit outside of a traditional brick-and-mortar classroom experience.

How can students fulfill the requirement for credit flexibility?

One approved method for meeting the credit flexibility requirement allows students to enroll in distance learning courses.

Offered online, Lincoln Interactive courses grant students the opportunity to fulfill this state requirement by presenting innovative and flexible educational experiences while utilizing state-of-the-art technology, an interactive and engaging curriculum, and the guidance and support of highly qualified, licensed instructors.

How might a student use a Lincoln Interactive course to meet the credit flexibility requirement?

For example, a student has a keen interest in forensics and would like to learn more about the field often associated with television shows that focus on investigations of crime scenes. As part of a credit flexibility plan, a student may choose to enroll in Lincoln Interactive's Cutting Edge Science: Forensics course to pursue his interest. While enrolled in the course, he engages with interesting and dynamic content while also being assessed through a variety of methods throughout the course.
